Use of Nondistrict Personnel as Investigators

The district may elect to retain nondistrict personnel for help in conducting investigations. Among the reasons for deciding to use nondistrict personnel are time commitment, area of expertise, perceived objectivity and availability.

At the conclusion of an investigation, the person asked to do that investigation will provide to the district a detailed summary of information, including the identity of the primary sources of information that will be relied upon to substantiate the facts. In situations where the report of the investigator contains a recommendation, the district will make the final decision regarding any action to be taken.

The nondistrict investigator will receive a copy of this policy upon appointment.
