

Personal Communication Devices and Social Media - Staff

Social Networking

CESD is committed to help ensure a safe and productive learning and working environment for all employees, students, parents, and community members to our facilities.

Existing and emerging technologies present new challenges for our staff and students. CESD recognizes the significant and ever-expanding potential educational value of using social networks for instruction and/or as a tool to assist learning and the potential educational opportunities around the appropriate use of social networks by teachers and students.

The superintendent and/or designee will develop a set of guidelines consistent with federal and state regulations that outline acceptable communications between and among CESD employees and students or otherwise posted through social networking (e.g., Facebook, Twitter, YouTube, blogs, wikis, etc.), whether originating inside or outside of the school work environment.

Mobile Electronic Devices

CESD recognizes that an effective public education system develops staff and students who are globally aware, civically engaged, and capable of managing their lives and careers. The board also believes that staff and students need to be proficient users of information, media, and technology to succeed in a digital world.

Electronic mobile devices enable staff and students to communicate, learn, share, collaborate, and create; to think and solve problems; to manage their work; and to take ownership of their lives.

The superintendent and/or designee will develop a set of acceptable use guidelines consistent with federal and state regulations and appropriate behavior for use of mobile electronic devices by CESD employees, students, and community members in CESD facilities.
