

Teaching about Controversial Issues

The Board supports teaching about appropriate controversial issues in the schools. The presentation and discussion of controversial issues will be on an informative basis. The development of ability to meet issues without prejudice and to withhold judgments while facts are being collected, assembled, weighed, and relationships seen before drawing inferences or conclusions, is among the most valuable outcomes of a free educational system.

Teachers will present both sides of controversial issues and will guard against giving their personal opinions until students have had an opportunity:

- to find, collect, and assemble factual material on the subject;
- to interpret the data without prejudice;
- to reconsider assumptions and claims and to reach their own conclusions.

By refraining from expressing personal views before and during the period of research and study, the teacher will encourage students to search after truth and to think for themselves.

Before launching a class in the study of an obviously controversial topic, a teacher will discuss with the superintendent: (1) its appropriateness to the course; (2) its appropriateness for the maturity level of the students; (3) the approach to instruction; (4) the teaching materials to be used.
