Private Tutoring for Pay

To assure all students reasonable assistance without charge from their own teachers and to avoid placing a teacher in a position where he/she may have a conflict of interest, teachers are not be permitted to receive money for tutoring any student they have in their classroom or on their caseload or upon whose evaluation or assignment they will be called upon to advise.

Further, during summer recess, paid tutoring may be given only to a student who was not a member of the teacher's class or caseload in the preceding semester.

These restrictions do not pertain to teachers who offer classes or lessons through either the Community School Program or to the community in general. For example, a music teacher who offers guitar lessons to the community at large, may have current or previous students choose to enroll in the class.

In all cases, teachers are requested to advise the appropriate principal of any tutoring for pay undertaken.

A teacher may not tutor any student for pay during regular district working hours or on district premises or use district materials during instruction. Paid tutors will not be allowed to provide their services to students during the time school is in session. Such activities shall take place before or after the regular school day, at the private tutor's location of business or at a centralized location to be determined by the District. Private tutors must follow District and Community School guidelines in order to provide their services for students in District facilities.
