Release Time for Religious Instruction

Students may be released from district schools for religious instruction. A student's parent or guardian must put the request to be excused in writing for pre-approval by the principal. The principal may release students for periods, not to exceed two hours in any week for grades 1-8 and not to exceed five hours in any week for grades 9-12. Students may also be excused from attending class on a particular day due to religious beliefs. Any tests or assignments the student misses because of religious instruction may be made up at another time.
