

Reducing the Risk of Communicable Disease

Blood and some other body fluids have the ability to transmit infectious disease, for this reason they must be treated with respect. Good hand washing is the best measure in the prevention of such diseases.